

Please do not diminish or preempt Indiana's telemarketing "no-call" list statute. The right to privacy is a basic personal human right, and Indiana's enforcement of that right has been implemented with overwhelming support. The people's right to privacy should be held in higher regard than the telemarketer's right to invade that privacy. Indiana implemented this program through the use of a "no-call" list that consumers had to submit a request to the state in order to include themselves. It is an "opt-in" program. It works. It serves the people. Please do not dilute it.
